

SOARS housing challenges participants to complete specific goals that will benefit their recovery and their ability to achieve independent living. SOARS housing program has five phase levels. The participant must complete each task in their current level to move into the next phase. A participant that is non-compliant or does not complete the assigned tasks in their current phase may be denied or suspended from moving into the next phase level.

Essential Components

- Housing is for four individuals in one household and all having shared living environment.
- House is 100% free of all alcohol and drugs and all tenants are required to have drug screens.
- All participants entering the Recovery House must be serious about their recovery
- No treatment is done at the Recovery House but participants choose services like Consolidated Care.
- Participants must pay rent and enter a tenant/landlord lease.

“Recovery is not for people who need it, it’s for people who want it.”

Drug addiction is a difficult obstacle and many are not successful. The element of the SOARS House is for people who are very serious about Recovery which is an environment that encourages support. Research shows that individuals in this type of setting are more likely to succeed than those who return to their previous environment.
